State Senator Gillmor

BG News/Alex Horvath

Gillmor seeks local support

Candidate visits GOP leaders

by Brian R. Ball
copy editor

State Senate President Paul Gillmor with Wood County Republican leaders yesterday morning to gain support for his bid to be the party's nominee for governor after the May 5 primary.

Gillmor, whose District 2 seat includes Bowling Green and his home of Port Clinton, is still in the race unofficially, but the senator wasn't hiding his plans during this stop of a three-week tour of Ohio. "This is not an official announcement, but I'm running," he said.

After talking with party faithfuls during a continental breakfast, Gillmor spoke to a group of 30 about his bid to become Ohio's next governor, charging Gov. Richard Celeste, a Democrat, with mismanagement of state government and ineffective leadership in handling the state's economic problems.

"We've had more scandals in this administration than in any administration in Ohio history," he said, citing what he said were unethical bidding practices by the administration among other scandals. Gillmor said it took the Republican majority in the state Senate to bring those scandals to light.

OHIO'S ECONOMY is also suffering from Celeste administration policies, he said, with Ohio ranking among the highest unemployment in the country and toward the bottom of the list in retaining and attracting businesses. This has resulted in many people leaving Ohio, he continued.

"The state of Ohio has the highest level of out-migration in the country," he said, citing statistics showing 300,000 people having left the state in the past four years.

While retaining a Republican majority in the state Senate, gaining more seats in the Democrat-controlled House and getting a Republican majority in the state Supreme Court were important, defeating Celeste topped his list for the party.

"Number one, we need to get new leadership in this state by retiring Dick Celeste," he said.

Gillmor continued to downplay the intra-party rivalry with former governor James Rhodes and state Sen. Paul Pfeifer, from Bucyrus, also seeking the party's nomination.

"I'm not running against Jim Rhodes," he said, discounting Pfeifer's candidacy, adding the campaign is "for Gillmor, for Ohio and for the public."

"We're running against Dick Celeste," he said.

He said his campaign will focus on getting his record known, including getting a 20 percent income tax decrease passed and making education a priority in the bi-annual state budget.

County emergency phone system possible

by Brian R. Ball
copy editor

A committee of elected officials and county citizens has been formed to investigate the possibility of installing an emergency dialing system for Wood County.

The system, which would make calling emergency services as easy as dialing 9-1-1, would have four to five computerized answering stations throughout the county to relay emergency calls to the police or fire departments, according to Marilyn Baker and Leonard Stevens, Wood County commissioners.

The committee is headed by Stevens, Bruce Bellard, mayor of Bowling Green, and Richard Britton, chairman of the Perrysburg Township Board of Trustees. Nine others have been named by them to be on the committee to look into the costs and technical aspects of the system. Members will meet for the first time Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the courthouse.

BUT EVEN if the system is approved by the committee, it will not be operational for one or two years, Stevens said.

The system may also need the approval of Wood County residents, but Commissioner Baker said she wasn't sure about the procedure for approval.

The county is looking into the "enhanced" 911 system which would pinpoint the location of the call and display the address and person's name on a monitor, Baker said, which is more expensive than the regular system.

The county had considered developing the program earlier this year, but costs were prohibitive and the issue was dropped, she said. The commissioners decided to look into the issue again after the Ohio Legislature passed a law this summer by which the state will help with the initial costs of the program.

The law provides up to a total of $15 million to telephone companies by giving utility excise tax credits for installing the systems, according to a spokesperson for the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

The spokesperson said local governments would be responsible for maintaining the answering points once installed and telephone companies may charge 20 to 30 cents a month per phone for their costs.

Baker said the four relay stations would cost about $80,000 to $100,000. Recurring costs would cost local governments an estimated $4000-$5000 a year.

Maxine Allen, University telecommunications services coordinator, said she has not been contacted about the system and didn't have any idea how the system would be linked to the University's system.

Egyptian airplane carrying hijackers reportedly in Sicily

ROME (AP) - An Egyptian military airplane carrying the four Palestinians who hijacked an Italian luxury liner and said they killed an American arrived in Sicily early today, Italian officials said.

A spokesman for the office of Premier Bettino Craxi, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that the aircraft had touched down at Sicily's Sigonella airport, a NATO base near Catania, at 12:30 a.m. (7:30 p.m. yesterday EDT).

"Yes, all the terrorists are on board," he said, adding that it appeared the plane would not be leaving any time soon.

He said the Egyptian plane was escorted by U.S. military aircraft, but he did not know how many. A NATO spokesman contacted by telephone said he had no immediate details on the landing.

An Italian government statement said President Reagan had asked Craxi to let the plane land, and Craxi agreed, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

Craxi's spokesman confirmed to the AP that he received a call from the White House, but did not know what was said.

ITALIAN NEWS agencies quoted Foreign Ministry sources as saying there had been several communications between Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti and Egyptian and American officials.

Earlier yesterday, Italian news agencies quoted unidentified sources as saying Italy had demanded the pirates be handed over for prosecution. They are reported to have killed an American Jew during the two days they held control of the Italian liner, Achille Lauro, with 500 people aboard.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak had told reporters in Cairo earlier that he had allowed the hijackers to leave Egypt on Wednesday night and they were the responsibility of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Craxi yesterday said Italy would seek the extradition of the hijackers after a preliminary investigation. Italian news agencies, quoting unidentified sources, said Italy had asked the Palestine Liberation Organization to turn over the four men because a murder had occurred on an Italian ship.

Students 'Waite' for tickets

by Patti Skinner
staff reporter

Students began lining up about 7 p.m. Wednesday night to purchase tickets for the Cheap Trick/John Waite concert, which went on sale yesterday.

Gail Swanka, University Activities Organization director, said she didn't expect this sort of line but was pleased students were excited about the concert and felt the tickets were worth waiting for.

Kim Forte, freshman English major, said she waited in line four hours to purchase concert tickets. She said she thought ticket distribution could have been more organized by having more than one person selling the tickets.

"We got really good seats, but they could have done it in less time," she said.

The tickets were first sold at the University Union box office but at the suggestion of Union employees, UAO moved the sales to the Grand Ballroom. Swanka said this was to get more people into the building and to allow clear walking space for other customers in the Union. She said the people waiting have been reasonable, and there have been no major problems with people cutting into line.

MIKE SOLT, associate director of the Union, said the ticket buyers have created no problems for the Union. "Most of them are folks who are in the Union anyway, and we enjoyed having them in the building," Solt said.

According to Swanka, if student sales continue to be good, there won't be many tickets for the general public.

"The way I've been trained in arranging this sort of campus concert, you have to depend on the bulk of the tickets going to students," she said.

The tickets go on sale to the general public Saturday at record store outlets: Head Shed, Boogie, Other Boogie, Finders and all three Abbey Road locations in Toledo. Tickets will not be sold at the Union box office this weekend, but students will be able to purchase them at Finders Records, 128 N. Main St.

WIOT in Toledo is the welcoming station for the concert and is doing some ticket giveaways including a grand prize of four front-row tickets, limousine service to and from the concert, and dinner for four.

Swanka said they printed 5,164 tickets but some are being withheld because the view is obstructed or the area is needed for equipment. She said there have been few problems with limiting students to purchasing only two tickets and if tickets continue to sell well, they expect to be sold out by Monday.

Record ratings not music to the ears

There are groups to rate movies, but the recent pressure to form a group to rate rock-and-roll lyrics is taking the cry of common decency too far. The Parents' Music Resource Center (PMRC) and the National Parent Teacher Association (PTA) are two of the groups calling for the labeling of albums which may contain offensive lyrics.

While most major record companies have agreed to a warning, "Parental Guidance - Explicit Lyrics," we agree with the music industry that even a letter rating of R for Restricted is impractical.

Although some music lyrics may be too explicit for young children, who would decide what is explicit and what isn't? The lines would not be as clearly defined as they are in movies.

The PMRC had originally wanted ratings of V for violence and D/A for references to drugs and alcohol, topics that are commonly addressed on prime time television.

While they may think their call for a rating of R is a compromise, we disagree with any type of ratings.

It is the parent's responsibility to know what their children are listening to. Once children grow up, they may make their own decisions on what to hear. If they find the music offensive, they don't have to buy the album.

If such a rating were imposed on the industry, children would probably become more curious and want to know what it is they are not supposed to be hearing. This would only make them want to listen to the music even more.

Other requests of the PMRC, such as printing the lyrics of "offensive" albums, are also impractical and useless. If the lyrics were printed for parents, what would stop the children from reading them? How would the lyrics be printed on cassettes?

The matter of rating albums has already been presented for a Senate hearing. Instead of wasting more of the legislators' time, more time and communication should be spent between parents and children in the home.

Water tower theater

by Ellen Bean

I'm writing this in response to the BG News editorial, "Theater all wet." Perhaps the News should have taken the advice it gave the city administrators to heart. Many of the points in the editorial were not very well researched.

Black Swamp Players, the community theater to which the editorial refers, has served Bowling Green for 17 years, not only as a vital part of its culture but as an award-winning group bringing much recognition.

The Players did, up to two years ago, operate and perform out of the Veterans' Building in Bowling Green City Park. When the police had to move into this building while their own facilities were being renovated, the Players went on the road and scratched for rehearsal space, storage space and performance space. We did this for two seasons - over 10 shows - and still we continued to win awards against community theaters whose cities had long ago provided them with permanent theater space. We have searched for permanent facilities and hope to have found them in the Water Tower.

However, Black Swamp Players would not be the only group with access to the space. Meetings for the city, outside speakers, the high school theater troupe, (perhaps you did not know that Bowling Green High School does not nor never has had an auditorium), and any other community group are all free to use the facility.

Not only have the Black Swamp Players served this community, but also this community's most vital resource - its children. I have been director of the Players' Young People's Theatre for three years. I have seen the magic of performing in many young faces - the determination they have when they take on a challenge - the flush of excitement when they come off stage floating three feet off the ground. These young people aren't just learning about theater, they are learning about life.

I started out in the Players' youth theater when I was 12 years old - it shaped my life - I found confidence I couldn't get anywhere else. If the emotional side does not appeal to you, let's look at this "logically."

The Water Tower was offered to different departments in the city as a storage space. They turned it down. The Parks and Recreation Dept. suggested it be offered to us. The Fire Dept. already has a million dollar facility built for them. Do you suggest they abandon it? As far as the money yet needed to finish turning the water tower into a theater, where there is a will there is a way. We fought for the space and we will continue to fight until the facility is completely finished.

One other point of the editorial has angered me for some time. It states that Bowling Green already has several theaters and that a community theater is not "necessary." How arrogant can you be? The University is not the center of this community. Life does exist outside of it! The many theaters on this campus are available to just that, the campus. The University theater has done some beautiful productions but that does not discount the Players' contribution to theater in this city. Many of our members, particularly the children, could find no other place to test their talents. We and the University are serving two separate groups with quite separate needs.

Flunkie, not pharaoh, of fashion

by Craig Hergert

John Molloy, author of Dress for Success, spoke here Wednesday night, and I went to hear him. My going there for a two-hour talk on this subject is like Quasimodo spending 15 minutes in a make-over salon.

I've never been a good dresser. I remember waiting for a friend once in a clothing store in Minneapolis and having one of the salesman ask me not to loiter. He was afraid passersby would mistake me for a mannequin and think that his store stocked what I was wearing. The look of relief on his face when I left rivaled the one Fred Silverman must have had a few years back when he got Superstars off of the NBC lineup.

I was in rare form Wednesday night, too, although I didn't realize how rare until I got home. A belt loop on the back of my blue jeans, the one right in the center that had been frayed for quite some time, had finally come loose and was sticking out like a little blue tail. I'm amazed that I wasn't asked to leave the lecture.

You see, Mr. Molloy came off as the kind of gentleman who can spot a belt-loop tail from 20 blocks away. So it's a tribute to his genteel manners that he didn't give me the boot. I'm sure that it would have been a fashionable boot, though, and immaculately polished, if he had given it.

There was only one thing Mr. Molloy said that really bothered me. He said people who grow up in the lower middle class have learned to be losers. As someone who was raised in this class, I deeply resent this remark. How dare this man tell me I've grown up learning to be a loser! For Mr. Molloy's information, I didn't have to learn. This is a quality that comes naturally to me, and I'm not about to give credit for it to the lower-middle class. A loser, yes, Mr. Molloy, but as well a self-made man.

So there. Actually, Molloy did say something that I agree with completely. He said a good vocabulary is a key to success. This remark pleased me to no end because I've lived by this principle for years and have forced the word sesquipedalian into every conversation I've had since the sixth grade. I think this tactic is largely responsible for my being in the income bracket I'm in today, which, by the way, threatens to break into five figures any year now.

Molloy's main point, of course, was that clothes make the man - or woman, or child or pet turtle or invertebrate or anything else, for that matter. To demonstrate what well-dressed people look like, which I suppose he felt necessary to do for an Ohio audience, Molloy showed a batch of slides of smart dressers. To demonstrate what you shouldn't wear, he had several slides that must have been taken at the National Convention for the Color Blind and one picture that appeared to be of a mannequin in a Minneapolis clothing store.

Molloy used these slides to prove that what a person wears and how he carries his body matter more in the business world than what a person actually knows. Having seen a top-level executive explain in a commercial that he bought an entire company after getting one good shave with that company's electric razor, I already suspected as much. I haven't looked closely enough to tell yet, but I'm guessing that this guy is one terrific dresser.

The part about carrying one's body intrigued me by itself. I'm thinking of having a luggage handle installed half-way down my back to make carrying my body a bit easier, especially for other people.

The whole concept of looks over talent fascinates me and it conjures up some interesting images as to what must go on as a matter of course in big business.

Typical business situation:

Employee: Boss, I might as well tell you, because you'll learn soon enough. I lost the Fultweiller account and the effects of this loss are so drastic and immediate that the trucks are here to move your desk from this plush office building to the men's room of the Burger King across the street. I'll resign right now unless you'd like the satisfaction of firing me in front of the entire company, the camera crew of Life's Most Embarrassing Moments, and my mother, who has a heart condition.

Boss: Uh, what's that you were saying, Wilson? I was just admiring your new pinstripe.

If Molloy is right and image is more important than knowledge, I think it's high time our universities redesigned their classes to give fashion top priority. Let's do away with those dull lab coats in biology, for example. And no more pictures in history texts of those poorly dressed slobs standing in breadlines. These are not the kinds of role models we want for our students.

So let's give fashion center stage in our curriculum. We can start with my field - English. I propose that we ask our creative writing faculty to rewrite some of the works of literature that are typically taught on campus so that they're applicable to the dress for success generation. That way we can assign these works without feeling guilty that they're useless in the business world. A list of readings might look like this:

• William Shakespeare, Two Gentlemen's Quartermen from Verona

• Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Minister's Paisley Veil

• John Milton, Pair of Ties Lost

• James Joyce, Portrait of the Artist, in a Dashing Beige Raincoat, as a Young Man

Orientation leader a positive, fun job

Recently having been selected to be part of the Orientation Board, I would like to share my experiences.

I have met many neat energetic people and have a lot of fun with them as we plan for the fall orientation program. Currently we have started recruiting student leaders to be fall orientation leaders.

You can learn many skills by being a leader and have fun while doing it. Past leaders have developed communication and interpersonal skills as well as more self-confidence. If you have had a positive University experience share your enthusiasm with new students.

Come and continue the tradition of 75 years of caring! Orientation leader applications are currently available until October 25th in 405 Student Services from 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. Become an integral part of a nationally recognized program. I still care!

USG on the move

Your recent article "USG makes request" shows that certain members of USG are taking a step in the right direction. Their move to get the new photo ID cards accepted by area businesses will make life a lot easier for university students.

Many students don't possess (or have lost) a valid driver's license, so having the student ID pass as a sufficient substitute in the community really makes a difference. Students would also feel more secure if they only had to carry their student ID with them; if a driver's license happens to be lost, it becomes a major ordeal to get it replaced, but that is not so with the university-issued ID cards. Also, the student becomes so accustomed to having the ID with them on campus (due to the many places where it is needed), life would be easier if he didn't have to worry about having a driver's license also.

I would like to commend Matt Shull, off-campus USG district representative, for the work that he has put into the photo ID project. He not only made it possible for the Bowling Green students to have photo ID cards, but is now working hard to have them accepted in the community. It's nice to have a student representative that accomplishes a major change on campus and then follows up on it to improve the student welfare even more.

Melden and the 'Doc' don't belong on page

I would like to know how the editors of the BG News can possibly allow two columnists, the likes of Bill Melden and Doc Doherty, to appear on its editorial pages. Both writers offend me - nay, they incense me, because of each one's fraudulent style.

Both Melden and Doherty have a style that is no doubt appealing; I have, in fact, no complaints about how they write. However, Melden's style is a facade hiding his total lack of concrete evidence and that he's never read anything at all about the subjects on which he chooses to preach. He simply attacks the person, an ad hominem argument that proves nothing. The piece on Karl Marx simply blamed Marx as the person for all the world's troubles; fully two-thirds of that article was nothing but Bible references and silly comments anyway. The Darwin piece, with comments like "Zaniness of modern science" and "Darwin was hatched" was equally ridiculous. Neither essay gave a shred of evidence that Melden has read works by either of those thinkers at all. It has been my impression for several years that a major part of one's college experience is in the free exchange of ideas; if a student is unaware of a subject, isn't it right that the student should keep his or her mouth shut, and ask some questions of experts in the field in order to find out about a topic? Isn't that why we have a library? It is very easy for Melden to criticize Marx and Darwin, and I'm sure Freud, for it is certain he knows nothing about them. I am disgusted, because the BG News is printing such shameful, uninformed articles. How can the editors of the BG News allow such dribble to appear on the editorial pages?

Now I would like to vent my deep disgust for the writings of Doc Doherty. Simply put, I am amazed that he is allowed to get away with plagiarism in a college newspaper. Mr. Doherty's article is simply a collection of stolen pieces from MAD Magazine and Paul Harvey News, among others. Haven't you ever wondered who all of those "friends" are? I demand that you, the editors of the BG News, confront Mr. Doherty and ask him where he gets his material. I seriously wonder if he is clever enough to make the stuff up himself; I do know that his weekly prescriptions are laden with stolen material. In last week's column, he made a joke out of criticism of his sophomoric attitude; I would like to ask Doherty when he will ever grow up.

I am ashamed for Melden, Doherty, and the editors of the BG News; the students on this campus who relish the free exchange of ideas deserve far better than uninformed ad hominem attacks and plagiaristic work in their college newspaper.

Group debuts on MTV

Band attempts to climb out of 'basement'

by Julie Fauble
staff reporter

High Society, a band including two University graduates, is trying to reach the top through the basement. The band will be competing in MTV's "Basement Tapes" at 10 p.m. on Sunday with their video, "Read my Lips."

"Basement Tapes" is a contest in which unsigned groups compete for prizes and a major recording contract. Viewers vote on the bands by calling a special 900 number.

High Society is composed of Jeff Kerscher, who sings and plays synthesizers and guitar, Steve Edwards on bass guitar, Rick McClain on drums and John McAfee, with guitar and vocals.

Kerscher and Edwards, the only original members of the band, played in a group called The Wall Street Band while they were students here at the University. In 1979 they started High Society and played at some UAO Coffeehouses and at local night clubs, Kerscher said.

THE BAND opened for The Busboys when they performed here last year and have opened for headliners such as Donnie Iris, Rare Earth and Mitch Ryder. They have also played in night clubs throughout the Midwest.

The band released a single called "Half a Chance" while still at Bowling Green and has just recently released a five-song extended play record.

The band does all its own management and booking, but Kerscher said it plans to sign with national management soon.

Kerscher described the band's music as modern pop/rock.

"It's mainstream top 40 ... hopefully," he said.

He said their music style is comparable to artists like Hall and Oates, Howard Jones and Duran Duran. However, he added, they are "not as bubble-gum as Duran Duran."

The band writes most of its music using computers. Kerscher said the computers make writing good songs faster and more efficient, but that the songs were not "assembly line" music.

THE BASIC advantage with computers, he said, is that they allow the band to try a lot of different things in a much shorter time, and they make things go more quickly in the recording studio.

The band has 25 new songs, which Kerscher said is important because a problem with a lot of new bands is that they have good songs for a first album, but then cannot follow it with a second quality album.

Kerscher said that he does most of the writing, and McAfee contributes some. He added that he does most of his writing when he is in a relaxed situation, such as driving or taking a shower.

"There's been so many times I've run out of the shower to write down lyrics, dripping all over the paper," he said.

The video "Read My Lips" is filmed on stage with tight shots and good editing, Kerscher said, adding that the band wants to use it as a tool to help people get to know the band members.

They are currently working on another video for their song "One in a Million," which will combine concert footage with some conceptual work, Kerscher said.

City 'courts' students

by Melissa McGillivray
reporter

Some students may find themselves sitting in a courtroom instead of a classroom if they are registered to vote in Wood County. Any registered voter in the county is eligible to be called for jury duty at Bowling Green Municipal Court, including University students.

Prospective jurors are chosen at random from a voter list and, since many students voted in last year's election, they are being selected to serve on a jury.

Legal exemptions from jury duty include being 70 years old or older, a lawyer, a dentist, an Ohio National Guard officer or personnel, a cloistered member of a religious organization, an active volunteer firefighter, an elected official or a physician.

PRACTICALLY ALL the University students who are called to jury duty complain to the court office, said Kathy Mazzarella, a deputy clerk at municipal court. A popular complaint is that it will take too much time away from the students' classes.

"You would think they'd never missed a class," she said.

Jury trials start at 8:30 a.m. on Tuesdays and most last one day.

Out of 30 juror letters that are sent out in the county each time, about five are for University students. Of the eight jurors selected, usually one or two are students.

A selected juror who does not show up for jury duty can be held in contempt of court, which carries a maximum penalty 10 days in jail and a $500 fine, according to Deputy Clerk Sandy Engle.

Many students feel better about jury duty when they find out they are paid $15 a day for jury duty, and $10 if they are selected and their case is dismissed.

Rocky's vies for market slice

by Sharon Zanny
reporter

Rocky Rococo, Bowling Green's newest pizza parlor, has started its delivery service this week and has increased the scope of its advertising at the University. The restaurant features an unusual service, drive-through pizza. It is sold by the pie and by the slice.

The accessibility of a drive-through can come in handy when the munchies strike at 2:30 a.m. and a slice of pizza is the only thing that will hit the spot.

"The corporation has always been successful in college towns. Students are learning that the 'slice program' drive-through quality is excellent," said Jim Brown, director of operations for the franchise, which is based in Wisconsin. This is the first Rocky Rococo restaurant in Ohio.

During the first few weeks of the semester, Rocky Rococo, attempting to gauge the needs of its customers, was open until various times during the week-end nights. The management has now extended weekend hours until 3 a.m.

JERRY LISS, owner of Pisanello's pizza, was not optimistic about the restaurant's success.

"There are four or five very strong independent pizza places in Bowling Green and the chain Rocky Rococo may have underestimated them," Liss said.

Because of the number of successful pizza parlors in Bowling Green, there is the need to competitively price the pizza, something which Rocky Rococo cannot do as a chain, Liss said.

Prices for individual slices range from $1.35 to $1.55. Whole pizzas range from $4.40 to $7.95.

Vietnam agreeable to a search for MIAs

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - In what could be a major breakthrough in the search for Americans missing in action, a top-ranking Vietnamese Cabinet minister says his government is agreeable in principle to allowing U.S. excavation teams into the Hanoi area for the first time.

Other official American and Vietnamese sources said Vietnam has agreed to a U.S. proposal that the countries carry out a joint survey and excavation of a crash site near Hanoi as an experiment.

Vo Dong Giang, a Cabinet minister without portfolio and the second-ranking official in the Foreign Ministry, told The Associated Press Wednesday that with regard to joint excavations: "In principle we are agreeable except in the crash sites where our security cannot permit foreigners to have access."

Sources said the exact time will have to be worked out.

Official: Threatened cutbacks not political CINCINNATI (AP) - A federal official denied yesterday that politics were behind a 1984 threat to cut off federal funds to Ohio for using state workers in a voter registration drive.

The dispute stemmed from a program that allowed people to register to vote at state government offices. Donald Devine, former director of the U.S. Office of Personnel Management, threatened to shut off Ohio's federal funds under a federal law that forbids civil service employees from being used for political purposes.

Ohio Secretary of State Sherrod Brown told a Cincinnati news conference yesterday that OPM recently withdrew the threat. And Brown, a Democrat, suggested that the administration of President Reagan, a Republican, originally raised the issue to hamper Brown's program in an election year.

Gene linked to miscarriages, birth defects

CLEVELAND (AP) - A single gene has been linked to miscarriages, prematurity and possibly spina bifida, according to a study of 1,100 couples and their children in the Cleveland area.

The study, released Wednesday through the New England Journal of Medicine, found parents who carry a specific gene were at least 1,000 times more likely to suffer a miscarriage in the first trimester than couples without.

Researchers call the gene C-3 and is found on the third chromosome of 9 to 10 percent of the white population.

Blacks were excluded from the study because the gene is rare among them.

Although the gene predisposes a couple to reproductive problems, it does not mean problems will occur.

BG icers open at FSC

by Karl Smith
sports editor

There's no pressure to repeat as national champions as there was a year ago, but the Bowling Green hockey team has its sights set on improving a fourth place league finish.

The Falcons open their 1985-86 season tonight against Ferris State in Big Rapids, Mich.

Last year, BG finished 21-21 and 17-15 in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association. FSC wound up last in the conference with a 11-26-1 mark.

Unlike last year, Falcon coach Jerry York will have plenty of experienced icers returning.

BG's defense could be the area of biggest improvement. All-CCHA goalie Gary Krulich, MVP of the 1983-84 national championship series, returns for his third season in the nets. Wayne Collins, a member of the championship team, graduated, but freshmen Dave Charbonneau and Dave Kwilas are expected to provide adequate netminding in his absence.

RETURNING POINT men include sophomores Doug Claggett and Scott Paluch, and junior co-captain Todd Fichel. Brian McKee is coming back to add depth after a knee injury last year while St. Lawrence transfer Tom Pratt will also see considerable playing time. Paluch has also been selected to compete on the National Junior Team during the World Junior Championships, Dec. 26-Jan. 4 in Hamilton, Ont.

Last year, BG started the season with an unproven offense. This year is a different story. Senior co-captain Jamie Wansbrough (37 goals, 33 assists, 70 points), an all-CCHA wing, could break both BG and CCHA goal scoring records before the year is over. Wansbrough needs 25 goals to set the school mark and 32 to break the conference record.

Sophomores Paul Ysebaert, Brian Meharry, and Brent Regan and junior Rob Urban all made names for themselves last year as legitimate scoring threats. Regan, however, will miss the FSC series due to a shoulder injury. All-CCHA wing and BG co-captain Iain Duncan, who bounced from wing to defense last year, is slated for wing as this year opens.

Mark Lori, a transfer from Northeastern University, defenseman Alan Leggett and forward Greg Parks are newcomers to the Falcon program.

Last year, BG managed a 2-1-1 advantage over FSC but York's teams are 9-6-1 against the Bulldogs. The Falcons own a 13-8-1 advantage in the series. The BG icers open their home season Oct. 18-19 against CCHA runner-up Lake Superior State.

Playoff Picture Dodgers blow out Cardinals

Ex-Falcon Orel Hershisser
tosses first playoff win

Last night, St. Louis struck first but Los Angeles hit hardest.

The hosting Dodgers topped the Cardinals 8-2 to take a 2-0 lead in the National League Championship Series.

St. Louis took a 1-0 lead in the third inning. Willie McGee singled with one out and advanced to second on Andy Van Slyke's walk.

McGee crossed the plate on Orel Hershisser's wild pitch.

But Hershisser, an ex-Falcon who struggled in the early going, rebounded to turn the momentum around in the bottom of the same inning.

Steve Sax laced a one-out single and advanced to third on a wild pick off attempt by Joaquin Andujar. Hershisser, a .197 hitter who rang up a .295 clip against the Cardinals, bounced a single over the head of third baseman Terry Pendleton. Sax scored and the rout was on.

Hershisser, who won his first playoff start, went nine innings, scattered eight hits, walked five and struck out four.

Kenny Landreaux and Bill Madlock knocked in runs in the third inning to give LA a 3-1 advantage and all the cushion Hershisser would need.

Greg Brock clobbered a two-run home run in the fourth to push the score to 5-1.

Andujar exited in the fifth after Landreaux scored and with Mike Marshall and Pedro Guerrero on base.

Andujar was 21-12 during the regular season but won only one of his last nine starts. He beat LA both times during the regular season.

He struck out four Dodgers in the first two innings and wound up with six whiffs on the night. However, in his four and one-third innings, he walked two and gave up eight hits.

On the other hand, Hershisser, 19-7 with a 2.06 ERA this year, hadn't lost a game since July 7, against the Cardinals, ironically. Also, Hershisser owns a perfect 12-0 record at Dodger Stadium where 55,222 packed in yesterday.

Rick Horton replaced Andujar and surrendered two runs in one and one-third innings. Bill Campbell and Jeff Lahti mopped up for St. Louis.

The series continues Sunday at St. Louis when LA's Bob Welch (13-4) and Danny Cox (18-9) square off in Busch Stadium at 1:05.

Falcons collide with upstart Eastern

by Tom Reed
assistant sports editor

In the past, Bowling Green has experienced the same problems with Eastern Michigan as a mailman with neighborhood dogs.

The Hurons aren't like a Doberman which could maul a letter carrier. No, EMU is more of the terrier variety which clamp on pant legs and prove impossible to shake.

Despite sporting poor records over the last two years, the Hurons have given the Falcons fits. In 1983, BG struggled to a 26-21 win and last year outlasted EMU 35-27.

This season, the dog has a better bite.

The surprising Hurons are 2-2, including a 21-10 upset victory over Toledo last week. Tomorrow night, BG travels to Ypsilanti, Mich., to face EMU.

"They have traditionally played tough against us," BG head coach Denny Stolz said. "This year they have a lot of momentum entering this game."

YOU DON'T need a calculator to tabulate all of the Hurons' wins since 1978 - just two hands. They are 10-52-4 in that span.

I haven't seen a team run through Toledo the way Eastern did for a long time.

BG head coach Denny Stolz

However, third-year EMU coach Jim Harkema believes his program now has an optimistic outlook.

"We are going in the right direction," Harkema said. "We have a chance to prove we can play against the best the Mid-American Conference has to offer two weeks in a row."

In their battle to gain conference respectability, EMU is led by a general.

Running back Gary Patton, nicknamed "the General" for obvious reasons, is second in the MAC in all-purpose yardage and fifth in rushing.

Last week, Patton spearheaded a strong running attack which bowled through the usually impenetrable Toledo defensive line.

"I haven't seen a team run through Toledo the way Eastern did last week for a long time," Stolz said.

On the ground, BG must not only stop Patton, but also quarterback Robert Gordon, who rushed for 99 yards against the Falcons last year.

MANY FANS are looking past EMU to next week's clash with undefeated Central Michigan. But Stolz argues that if fans saw the recent EMU game films, they would take tomorrow's game more seriously.

"Our players have watched the films, they know how good Eastern is," he said. "The Toledo game definitely proved that."

To add to the Falcons' problems, tomorrow's contest will be played at night. BG has played just two games under the lights in four years.

"We alter our game-day schedule very rarely so this is like playing in a completely different environment," Stolz said. We might practice at BG High School to get use to playing at night."

Doyt Perry Stadium, the Wrigley Field of the MAC, has no lights.

Despite the unusual circumstances, BG won't alter its game plan. Brian McClure will attempt to repeat his 427-yard effort against EMU in 1983.

The Falcons will also try to run against a team which is the second worst in the MAC versus the rush. Last week against Western Michigan, Bernard White and Darryl Story combined for almost 160 yards.

FOR DEMOCRACY IN SOUTH AFRICA

We, the undersigned, wish to express our unyielding opposition to the white minority government in South Africa. We strongly condemn that government's efforts to extend its already dictatorial powers by declaring a state of emergency and arresting hundreds of opponents. We support the efforts of those South Africans, including Bishop Tutu and Nelson Mandela, whose goal is the creation of a democratic society.

We therefore call on all Americans and on the U.S. government to unequivocally and publicly support the extension of full voting rights to all South Africans.

Today's clue; what they say about BGSU students on a Fri. night. Stop in at Baskin Robbins and try to guess our secret flavor of the day.
Stadium Plaza
Terri Trowbridge: Thanks for helping us survive the Greek Olympiad, we couldn't have done it without you! Great job!
Love, your Kappa sisters

THE BROTHERS OF ATO:
THE BULB IS MISSING
THE LIGHT IS GONE
YOUR PORCH WILL BE DARK
FROM DUSK UNTIL DAWN
THE KIDNAPPERS
The Brothers of Sigma Alpha Epsilon would like to congratulate Mike Lucke and Mary Beth Musselman on their recent SAE/Chi-O lavaliering. Phi Alpha, Lukas & Jim
The girls of KK69-ME would like to thank the guys of Tri-Fila-Thi for the Sunday paper and use of their phone.
P.S. Will you marry me, Uncle Elmer?

The SAE's would like to thank all of the Dees Gess for one of the best Greek Weeks ever! "I knew we should have hit those button sales harder." But, "WHATEVER." Thanks again, you guys are the greatest. SAE's and Dee Gess's #1.
Love, the SAE's
The Sig Eps are looking forward to a great time with the Dees Gess's on Friday night.
Theta Chi's & Phi Delts: What a Greek Week team. 2nd place in the Greek Review, and 3rd place overall for Greek Week. Thanks for a super week!
Love, the Kappas
To all our SAE dates:
"YALL" get ready for the Kappa Koral Gonna dance all night with that MARVELOUS gal!
Jump on the wagon, we're goin' for a ride, Sittin' in the hay side by side,
Kick up your heels dancin' in the hay,
Cause goin' with a Kappa is the only way.
Meetin' ya at Sundown,
Your Kappa gals

P.S. I'll be there like I'll
To ALL WIGI MEMBERS THAT WORKED AT THE CAR WASH: SUPER JOB! THANKS FOR YOUR TIME AND EFFORT! —EXEC. STAFF
To Eileen the Swimmer, to Christy who Bikes, and Annie the Runner in tennis or Nikes: The Triathlon tomorrow will be quite fun. Especially when the 3 of you place number 1! Three cheers for three special friends!
Love, Coach
TOM— I THOUGHT THIS MIGHT MAKE YOUR DAY. THANK YOU FOR BEING SO SPECIAL. I LOVE YOU! CHARLENE
